

How to protect personal data on Facebook

Third-party apps which are accessed through Facebook may have access to more of your personal data than you were aware of. This includes information such as your date of birth, email address, photos you've shared, your friends list and your Facebook likes.

To take access away from these app developers or modify what they can see about you, follow the instructions below:

How to delete/modify apps

- 1 Log into your Facebook account
- 2 Click on  and select Settings
- 3 Select the setting for  Apps
- 4 Hover over any apps you wish to know more about. You can choose to edit what you share with them. If you wish to remove an app, click remove (X)
- 5 Click the Remove button (X)

Make sure you click on save when you have made your edits.

Click on show all to ensure you don't miss any apps from the list of those that may have access to your personal data.

How to protect personal data on Facebook

Once I delete the app, does that mean it no longer has my personal data?

By deleting the app, you're stopping any further access. However, it's important to note that the app may still have information about you saved. You have the right to contact each developer and ask them to remove any existing information from the app's servers. When modifying the settings for each app, this option will be provided. Since the introduction of the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) in May 2018, rules for how companies can treat your data have become stricter. The new EU regulation limits the amount of data companies can collect and sets higher standards for storage and safe-keeping of information.
